High Liner Foods, based in Lunenburg, has been purchased by the Japanese company, Umios.

High Liner Foods sale expected to create growth opportunities in Lunenburg

By YASMIN DUALE
yasmin.duale@southshorebulletin.ca

LUNENBURG - High Liner's planned $804-million sale to Japanese company Umios should have little or no effect on its historic operations at Lunenburg. In fact, High Liner's president and chief executive is forecasting future opportunities for investment.

Umios has agreed to keep High Liner's workers, buildings, and offices. It would be the Japanese company's acquisition of one of the largest producers of frozen fish in North America.

"There will be no impact on our facility in Lunenburg or, frankly, any of our facilities across North America," said High Liner CEO Paul Jewer.

"As part of this deal with Umios, they've committed to our people and our plans, and they've committed to keeping our head office in Nova Scotia."

Under the agreement announced by the two companies, Umios will pay $27 per share in cash to acquire High Liner for a total purchase price of $804 million. This will make the company private and take it off the Toronto Stock Exchange, making High Liner a mainstay of Umios's North American business.

High Liner was established in Lunenburg in 1899 and has grown to be a leading Canadian and American distributor of frozen fish and fish products.

The company employs about 1,300 people in North America, including hundreds in Nova Scotia. Its Lunenburg plant has about 265 unionized employees.

Jewer said that the maintenance of the activities of High Liner and the employment of its workers was a common goal during the negotiations, rather than a commitment the company was forced to win.

"We would certainly have prioritized it in our negotiations, but the good news is that we didn't really have to because it was also a priority for them," he said.

Tentative agreement reached between Nova Scotia and CUPE, averting school strike

By YASMIN DUALE
yasmin.duale@southshorebulletin.ca

SOUTH SHORE - A provincewide strike by over 5,500 school support staff has been averted following a tentative deal between the provincial government and the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE).

The premier's office issued a statement on Oct. 30 that a tentative agreement with the CUPE education support workers has been reached. The result of the agreement is that school operations and programs in the province will be as usual next week.

The move came just a few hours after the union filed a 48-hour strike notice, with the workers ready to go on strike Monday if the provincial government did not agree to their wage demands.

The two sides resumed negotiations Friday night after eight hours of discussions on Thursday that failed to reach an agreement.

The union had pushed for a $3.50-per-hour wage increase for all members by 2029. The union says the government's previous offer of a 9.86 per cent increase

Mahone Bay earns national recognition in Communities in Bloom awards

By YASMIN DUALE
yasmin.duale@southshorebulletin.ca

MAHONE BAY - Mahone Bay has been awarded five Blooms in the 2026 Communities in Bloom competition, including two national achievement awards and a special mention for its Faerie Trails project.

The town received this recognition at the Communities in Bloom Provincial/National/International Symposium and Awards Ceremonies in Montréal and Rosemère, Que. The town won five Blooms in the Atlantic Edition – Population Evaluated category, as well as National Outstanding Achievement Awards for Environmental Action and Heritage Conservation.

For Penny Carver, councillor and Communities in Bloom committee liaison, it's an honour for the town's image and the people and projects that have contributed to its uniqueness.

"The role of our Communities in Bloom working group has been to shine a light on what makes Mahone Bay so special," Carver said. "It has been an absolute joy to showcase the people, places, and projects that make Mahone Bay a vibrant, thriving community!"

The results were recorded after Mahone Bay's the third year of participation in the program. The six categories included are community appearance, environmental action, heritage conservation, tree management, landscape, and plant and floral displays.

Susan Ellis and Larry Hall, two judges from outside the area, praised the city's iconic three-church panorama, its colourful homes and gardens, its greenery, and its shopping and restaurant scene. The judges also praised city maintenance and the contributions of volunteers, businesses, and organizations.

The projects described included the Edgewater Project and the Living Shoreline Project. Both projects are important to coastal resilience and public safety because they address issues of flooding and erosion. Other projects include the Bay Way, the town's solar farm, heritage homes, tree inventory map, Talking Trees program, and community scarecrow displays.

The judges, however, had special praise for the Faerie Trails. They commended the woods for being original and engaging to all visitors.

Carver said the project was particularly meaningful because it reflects the community's character.

"While it's wonderful that the judges cited many features that impressed them, I'm particularly pleased that the judges singled out the Faerie Trails project for special mention because it exemplifies the joyful, creative, and connective energy that makes our community blossom and it is truly unique," she said.

The town hopes to build on this recognition and apply the judges' suggestions.

One of the ideas is to establish pollinator trails in bioswales. These are landscaped channels that control stormwater and support vegetation and wildlife.

"Town council and staff will consider which of their suggestions we might be able to incorporate into future planning," Carver said.

She hopes that the awards will motivate residents and local groups to continue to support community projects.

"I expect that this year's awards will heighten a sense of pride of place for residents, organizations, and businesses and will re-invigorate their ongoing community work," she said.

Mayor Suzanne Lohnes-Croft also praised the committee, town staff, businesses, community groups, and volunteers who were involved in earning the honor.

"Mahone Bay's Communities in Bloom volunteers dedicate an immense amount of time and energy to the program, bringing important projects into focus, preparing for visiting judges, sharing the community's story, and celebrating the people who make good things happen."

"They were buying High Liner to support growth in North America, so it was obvious to them that they needed and wanted to make a commitment to our people, facilities and business."

Umios is one of the world's largest fish companies with offices in Japan, North America, Europe and Asia. It's been one of High Liner's long-term suppliers.

Jewer said the acquisition would combine Umios's global reach and access to the resources of the sea with High Liner's established manufacturing and distribution capabilities in North America.

"Combining that with our North American capabilities in distributing and manufacturing the great seafood products we produce presents opportunities," he added.

Jewer also pointed to research and development and product development as possible areas of collaboration in promoting a wider and more diversified consumption of fish products.

The proposed purchase could provide an opportunity for future investments in the High Liner's plants and staff, but Jewer did not reveal any details of projects or financial commitments beyond those which have been announced in connection with the deal.

"If anything, this creates an opportunity for potential future growth and investment as we work together to drive greater seafood consumption in North America."

Earlier this year, the company was approached by Umios. A special board committee was set up to consider its options, including proposals from other potential buyers, before selecting Umios.

High Liner's board unanimously recommended the offer to shareholders. Thornridge Holdings Ltd., High Liner's largest shareholder with 41.4 per cent of its shares, is also behind the move.

The decision to purchase the company will be taken by shareholders in December. This requires the approval of at least 75 per cent of the votes cast and other approvals.

If approved, the deal is expected to close in early 2027, at which point High Liner would become a wholly owned subsidiary of Umios.

Three people charged in stolen vehicle probe

Law enforcement learned of gun complaint involving occupants of a sport utility vehicle (SUV) in that community. Just after 8 a.m. Aug. 11, Bridgewater Police Service received an alert from Lunenburg District RCMP about the suspect vehicle likely heading toward town.

As the investigation unfolded, police learned the SUV had been stolen from a First South, Lunenburg County address.

Just before 9 a.m., officers intercepted the vehicle near the Highway 103 interchange in Wileville and arrested three people without incident. The trio were taken into custody at gunpoint because call information indicated the suspects were in possession of a firearm, making the matter of high-risk to public and officer safety. Officers are trained and practice high-risk arrests when weapons are, or are believed to be, present.

The accused are free on court-ordered conditions pending their next appearance in front of a judge.

Anyone with information that may help with the investigation is asked to contact Bridgewater Police Service at 902-543-2464.

TO THE EDITOR

What is up, Mr. Premier?

The Editor,

In an interview, professor Sibo Chen said that public concerns over the AI facility at Point Tupper are valid. Premier Houston's communication advisor, William Burns, criticized Chen for his remarks in an e-mail. In an apparent attempt to intimidate Chen, Burns copied the email to Chen's department head.

The e-mails Burns sent accused Chen of being "irresponsible" and "uninformed".

Among Chen's areas of expertise are the social, political, and environmental implications of artificial intelligence. He has been studying public controversies related to natural resources in Canada for over a decade.

But Houston insists that Chen is "clearly lacking in information...yet speaking as an expert."

This is one more example of Houston trying quash facts that don't suit him

It's quite clear that the Houston government tries to control its narrative by suppressing press coverage, by limiting debate in the legislature, and by only pretending to encourage informed public discussion and participation.

Government decisions made without informed public input are the mark of a class society in which the well-heeled and the well-connected assume that the opinions of the rest of us don't matter.

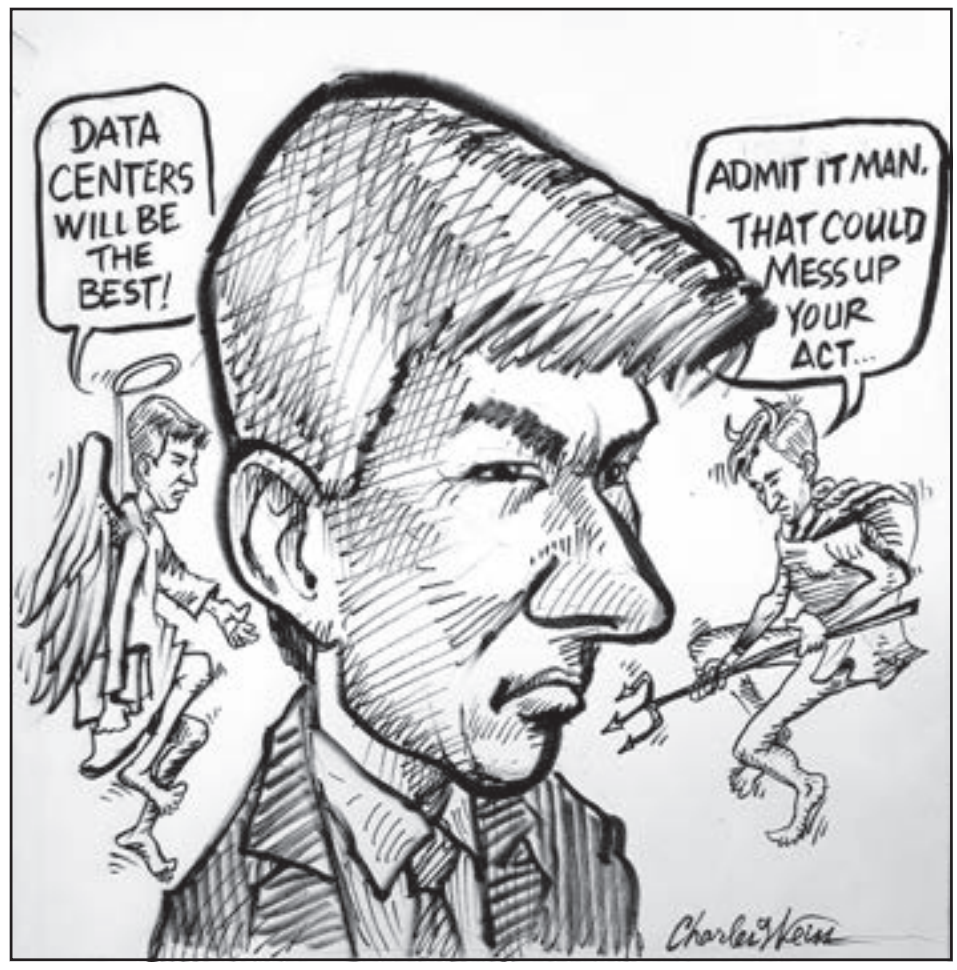

It's to the advantage of an entitled authoritarian government to withhold information. People who know stuff ask smart questions and those questions are viewed as a threat to authority.

After she left the PC party, Becky Druhan said Houston coached his MLAs to adopt the attitude that "every story should have an enemy, and to make sure that you knew who the enemy was when you were making...plans for communicating about the story."

We are "the enemy" if we question Houston's policies. Instead of considering thoughtful and reasonable examinations of his policies Houston wants to suppress honest discussion with calculated "stories".

For over 10 years we have watched Donald Trump degrade democracy and become more and more contemptuous of voters. It is terribly sad to see the same thing happening in this wonderful province.

LCLC failed in their responsibility

The Editor,

As a regular participant in, and former board member of the Elderfit aquasize program, I was shocked and dismayed to learn that Lunenburg County Lifestyle Center (LCLC) management has found itself unable to negotiate access to their pool for this group, after many years of amicable co-operation.

LCLC is a publicly-funded institution that exists to promote health and well-being. The short- sighted, self-defeating action taken by LCLC disregards their role in ensuring a better quality of health and life for a segment of the senior population in our South Shore area.

In its 25+ years of existence, Elderfit has grown from a handful of participants to membership in excess of 150 persons with varying medical and mobility needs. Administered by a dedicated team of volunteers and taught by highly qualified instructors who upgrade their teaching skills every year, the program is tailored to serve the physical needs and abilities of a population in the roughly 55- to 85-year-old range.

Until now, Elderfit has paid year-round rent for five sessions weekly of pool time, negotiated on the proviso that LCLC members may attend these classes free. On any given day, approximately 50 per cent of attendees are LCLC members who benefit from the expertise of our trained instructors.

Elderfit members will tell you that water exercise addresses their strength, balance, mobility and endurance in a way that is not possible "on land" as their bodies battle the inevitable physical challenges that come with age. An added benefit of improved mental health results from feeling physically better, and from the camaraderie and social connections that bind our members.

And let me remind LCLC that this group of tax-paying seniors has contributed thousands of dollars out of their own pockets for local charities through our annual fundraisers. We contribute to the health and well-being of our community. It seems LCLC has failed in its responsibility to assure that this bonded group of seniors is able to stay in daily contact to sustain their own well-being, while supporting the quality of life of others in our municipality.

Lynne Barkhouse,

Council proclaims Municipal Awareness Week

SOUTH SHORE BULLETIN STAFF

COOKVILLE - The Municipality of the District of Lunenburg has proclaimed Nov. 1-7, as Municipal Awareness Week and is inviting residents to attend its first Community Open House on Tuesday, Nov. 10, from 4 to 6 p.m. at the Municipal Administration building on Allée Champlain Drive in Cookville.

The open house, themed "Supper's On. Let's Chat," will provide an opportunity for residents to meet council, municipal staff, community organizations, and emergency services personnel while learning more about municipal programs, services, and projects.

"Municipal Awareness Week is a wonderful opportunity to learn more about the programs, services, projects, and people that keep our communities running," said Mayor Elspeth McLean-Wile.

Residents can explore displays, ask questions, connect with community partners, enjoy complimentary refreshments and take part in family-friendly activities.

Participating organizations include LC Wheels, Northfield and District Fire Department, Lunenburg County REMO, South Shore Waste Solutions, and Region 6 Solid Waste Management.

over five years, or an additional $2.22 per hour for the lowest-paid workers, was inadequate.

"We came back to the bargaining table anticipating that government would make meaningful changes to their final offer," said Nelson Scott, chair of the Nova Scotia School Board Council of Unions (NSSBCU), which represents eight CUPE locals.

"Ultimately, what they brought us does not get most members to $3.50 by 2030, let alone by 2029."

However, Friday's bargaining yielded a tentative agreement which CUPE will now bring to the members with a recommendation that they vote yes.

"Both sides listened and together found a way forward," Houston said in his statement.

He also commended the parties who negotiated for their hard work and said that the agreement would avoid disruptions to students and staff.

The terms of the tentative agreement were not mentioned in the Friday evening statement. Details will be presented to members in the coming days. Each local will contact its members directly to provide information on the contract and the voting process.

The tentative agreement will help ensure that students will not face a potential disruption due to a strike. However, it does not address the separate transportation issues facing South Shore families.

CUPE members will have a chance to vote on the tentative agreement. In the meantime, the province says schools will operate on their regular schedules next week.

Ninth annual female firefighter networking day held in LaHave

kevin.mcbain@southshorebulletin.ca

LAHAVE – Sixty female firefighters enjoyed a weekend of learning, networking and getting to know one another at the ninth annual female firefighter networking day held Oct. 24 at the LaHave and District Fire Hall.

Friday night was a fun social evening with games and special speakers. Saturday was an all-day affair with participants split into groups to learn and refresh various skills from wildland training, radio work, ladder work, SCBA instruction, working with pumps, forcible entry procedures, mazes, working with power tools and on-site fire training.

Riverport Deputy Chief Candice Dares, one of five on a host committee said that the event went well.

“It started off with us going over the basics of firefighting, kind of a review for some and to help train newer recruits that haven’t really witnessed some of this stuff before,” she said. “In the afternoon we took all those basic skills and put them together to go over some real-life scenarios.”

There were about 60 firefighters from under-18 to others that have 30+ years of experience, registered from mutual aid departments across Lunenburg County. Lead trainers were experienced females from the various departments. There were a few male instructors that attended in the afternoon for support.

All firefighters in the different departments do go through training, but this event hits a little different.

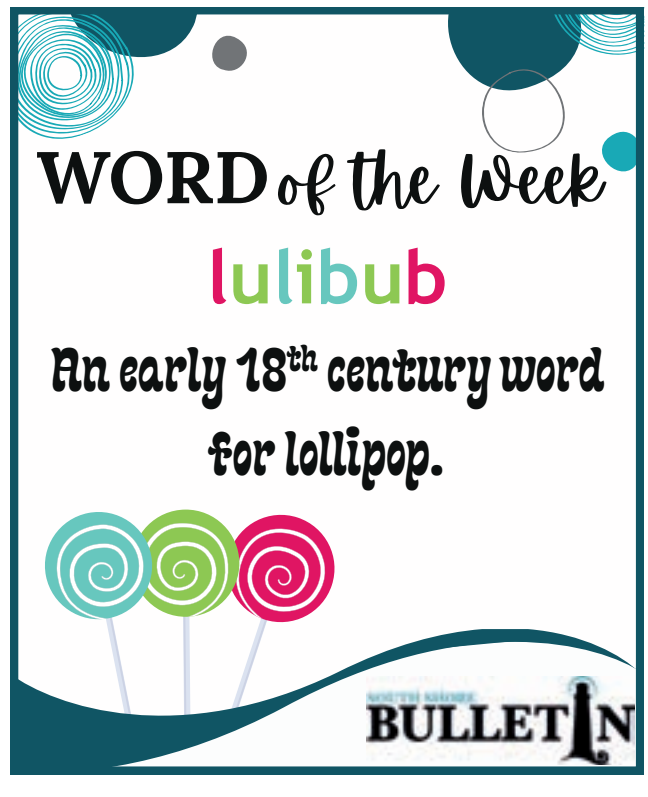

“We do this because it’s a hard thing to do, to be a woman firefighter in a man-driven world. It’s not like we get support all the time, but there are some that aren’t as fortunate as some of us are and may find it difficult to ask tough questions,” she said.

“We’re just trying to create a positive environment where everyone can learn no matter where they’re at and ask the tough questions without any type of criticism or judgement and they can learn at their own pace.”

Dares said that the event is hosted by a five-member committee made up of firefighters from different departments and each have different roles and all have different expertise that they bring to the table.

The event has been held at different departments each year since 2013 (a few years had to be skipped because of COVID-19 and other circumstances). Each year’s events and learning areas differ each time as well.

Business excellence rewarded at chamber event

Record number of nominations recorded this year

Story and Photos By KEVIN MCBAIN
kevin.mcbain@southshorebulletin.ca

BARRINGTON – A record total of 170 nominations for six different categories came in this year as part of the Shelburne and Barrington Area Chamber of Commerce Business Excellence Awards.

The sold-out awards' banquet was held at the Barrington Recreation Complex Oct. 26.

"It was a great evening out to celebrate the accomplishments of businesses, every business, and to have a bit of learning with the presentation and a tax-deductible evening out to network and socialize with other business owners and members of your community," said Anita Telford, board chair of the Shelburne and Area Chamber of Commerce.

"I would like to promote it more, so that more business in general, come out. It was a nice evening to be there and celebrate with other businesses."

The event was emceed by Darren Hudson and food was served up by Charlotte Lane Cafe and Wanda Atkinson of Roaming Appetite and drinks were served up by members of the Barrington Curling Club.

Guest speaker for the evening was Dr. Simon Berge, associate professor of the Faculty of Management, Dalhousie; and the chair, Department of Leadership and Organizations.

His research focuses on strengthening local economies through community development, co-operatives, social enterprises and leadership.

This is the first time that a speaker was part of the event, according to Telford.

In the end, it was all about "celebrating businesses. To me that part was fabulous. To see the calibre of businesses, organizations and employees that we have in Shelburne County is just amazing."

She said the main theme throughout the presentation of finalists was "giving back to the community."

Her favourite category was the Young Entrepreneur of the Year. She said the top three were in their 20s.

"To me, to showcase that, especially for high school kids, it shows there are opportunities to become entrepreneurs in their early 20. There's a huge spectrum of tasks to be an entrepreneur and these kids are doing it all in their early 20s."

Right: Dr. Simon Berge, associate professor of the Faculty of Management, Dalhousie; and the chair, Department of Leadership and Organizations was this year's special guest speaker at the Shelburne and Barrington Area Chamber of Commerce's Business Excellence Awards held in Barrington Oct. 26.

Finalists included Jodie Acker of Franny's Café and Kaylene Bradley, owner of Kaylene's Beauty Salon.

This year's awards covered six different categories and one other, People's Choice Award, was added for those that didn't fit into those six categories. Telford said these businesses were nominated and deserved to be recognized.

The top three finalists in each category were named at the event with a bit of a comment on what they do and why they should win the award, followed by the naming of the winner.

The following are names of the winners, chosen by an independent judging panel.

People's Choice: Shelburne Guildhall Summer Music Series

Diversity in Business: Clark's Harbour Seafood Ltd.

Young Entrepreneur of the Year: Nate Wickens, Next Level Property Management & Services

Exporter of the Year: Allendale Electronics Ltd.

Community Dedication: Shelburne County Youth Health and Support Association

Employee of the Year: Helen Nickerson, Dan's Ice Cream Shoppe

Business of the Year: Shelburne County Towing.

The event was not held last year and Telford said that she is unsure of whether they will plan an event for next year or in 2028.

Silver Guardian program aims to address dementia-related domestic violence on South Shore

By YASMIN DUALE
yasmin.duale@southshorebulletin.ca

SOUTH SHORE - The Lunenburg County Seniors' Safety Program on Nova Scotia's South Shore is determined to assist families, long before the escalation of a domestic incident with a dementia sufferer.

The program applied for a federal grant through the Family Violence Initiative Fund to develop the Silver Guardian Program in conjunction with the Lunenburg County RCMP and Bridgewater Police Service.

This comes at a time when the aging of the population is causing increasing concern about the relationship between dementia and abuse in older adults.

Lisa Bennett, the county's Seniors' Safety Program co-ordinator, said the staff had noticed this through police, families and members of the community.

"As the senior population increases, so does the prevalence of dementia-related vulnerabilities and associated risks of abuse within caregiving relationships," she said.

With the Silver Guardian program, authorities aim to take a proactive, community-based approach. Its purported goal is to provide information and advice to families, in addition to offering them help in the form of workshops, presentations and public education campaigns.

The purpose of the initiative is to educate people about the connection between dementia and domestic violence, to draw their attention to the signs, to provide them with practical tools for their work and to promote safe and respectful caregiving practices.

A big part of the identification of this need has come from the families themselves, who've had to find their own way through dealing with impacted loved ones.

The project is being developed at a time when police authorities are trying to find alternatives to traditional criminal justice responses in cases where someone with degenerative brain disease is involved in violence against a family member.

Cpl. Dominic Laflamme, of the RCMP in Lunenburg County, said last year that he had observed an increase in incidents of this nature and that officers need more tools to cope with it. He said police must lay charges when an assault has occurred, but they can ask Crown prosecutors to consider resolutions outside the courtroom.

The Silver Guardian initiative was intended to help families seek help before such a situation arose.

Bennett said caregivers and family members affected by dementia-related domestic violence can experience fear, stress, exhaustion, loneliness and uncertainty about where to go.

"Dementia can bring significant changes in behaviour, while the ongoing demands of caregiving can leave family members overwhelmed and emotionally depleted," she said.

"In some situations, this may contribute to harmful interactions or unmet care needs. Recognizing these challenges with compassion is essential to supporting everyone involved."

For those concerned about their own safety or the safety of someone they know, Bennett encourages people at risk to contact support systems and tell someone. This could be the Seniors' Safety Program, local police, or a family health-care provider.

"Local supports include Lunenburg County Seniors' Safety, the Alzheimer Society of Nova Scotia, Caregivers Nova Scotia, local police, and family health-care providers, home care and VON (Victorian Order of Nurses). The LCSSP Helping Tree is also a valuable resource for connecting individuals and families with services throughout Lunenburg County," she added.

The Silver Guardian program's additional resource tools are still being developed.

The initiative builds on the broader work of the Lunenburg County Seniors' Safety Program, which is based at Bridgewater police headquarters. The program offers services such as home visits, referrals, safety information, and presentations about senior abuse, fraud, cyber-safety, and home security.

Through visits to the homes of vulnerable or isolated seniors, the program connects with them, addresses personal safety concerns, and refers them to other services when needed.

Bennett said better awareness and easier access to support are important for protecting both people with dementia and those caring for them.

"No one should have to navigate these challenges alone," she said.

Chester Playhouse executive director resigns

SOUTH SHORE BULLETIN STAFF

CHESTER – The Chester Playhouse is looking for a new leader.

Andrew Chandler, executive director of the theatre since 2021, has resigned.

During his tenure, ticket sales rose by almost 30 per cent with the theatre nominated for a recent East Coast Music Award for venue of the year, according to Tom Boyne, chairman of the Chester Playhouse Society.

"Andrew skillfully steered the Chester Playhouse ship for over five years, helping us through difficult times such as the COVID-19 pandemic, and of course the devastating (2021) fire that occurred at the Playhouse," Boyne said in the theatre's newsletter.

The historic theatre was destroyed by the fire, as it was due to reopen after an $800,000 renovation. It finally did reopen in August 2023.

"We are grateful for his years of enthusiasm, presenting memorable events that were inclusive, insightful, and entertaining," Boyne said of Chandler's leadership. "We at the Playhouse wish Andrew the best of luck in his future endeavours and thank him for his time at the Playhouse."

Boyne said Chandler helped increase the theatre's shows and events to more than 110 nights of programming a year. He also credited him with leading improvements to the venue itself and making tickets more accessible to more people.

Boyne did not give a reason for Chandler's departure, but said Chandler plans to make an announcement in the next few weeks. He said the society's board is working on a succession plan to find a new executive director.

Neither Boyne nor Chandler could be reached for comment.

Former Bridgewater author tells the stories of Nova Scotia Nurses in The First World War

By JOHN CUNNINGHAM
For the South Shore Bulletin

Adruenna (Addie) Tupper, who had worked as a nurse in Bridgewater, was one of 56 Nova Scotian nurses known to have served during the First World War. Sadly, she was among the first to die.

Her story, along with that of the provinces' other 1914-1918 war nurses has been meticulously researched and recounted in a recently released book by former Bridgewater resident, Dr. Brian Tennyson. Entitled Bluenose Bluebirds, Nova Scotia's Military Nurses in The Great War, it draws its title from the blue uniforms and white veils worn by the nursing sisters.

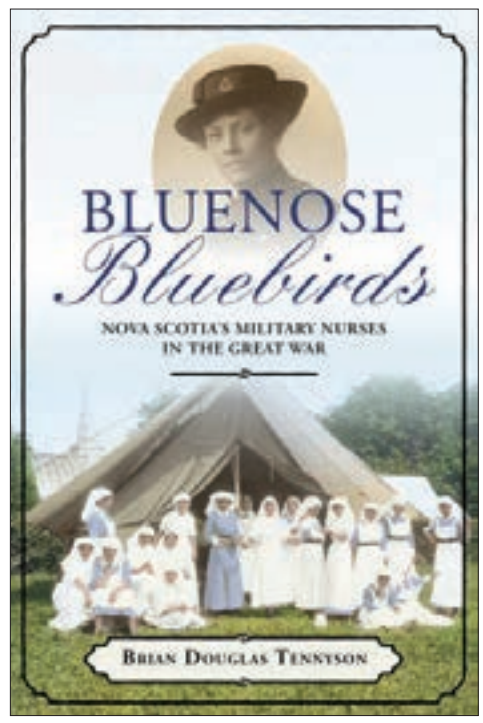

Nurse Tupper, American trained and widowed, joined her family and nursed in Bridgewater. Then, when well over the maximum age of enlistment, she joined the Canadian Army Medical Corps Nursing Service. By October 1914, she left Quebec City aboard a troopship in the massive convoy that transported 30,617 troops of Canada's First Division to Plymouth, England.

At first, Lieutenant Colonel George Nasmith took the view that the nursing sisters had a double advantage of being both "officers and women." But it wasn't long before he acknowledged that "even after the strain of heavy engagements and being subject to heavy bombing, the nurses played the game and played it well."

Casualties from the first two months fighting on the Western Front had already created a need for medical facilities closer to the front that could function with less staff than the large general hospitals far behind the lines. Canada had set up a unit designated the No. 2 Canadian General Hospital. Its staffing requirements- a matron and 16 nurses compared to 100 in a general hospital.

Nurse Tupper was assigned to the No. 2 CGH, the first of the small Canadian hospital to be established in France. It arrived there in November 1914 even before the first Canadian Troops. First headquartered at Le Touquet, a resort on the English Channel Coast, changing war conditions would dictate the need for mobility.

Her unit had moved on to Outreau, France, a suburb of Boulogne, by April 1915, when Tupper wrote "every sister of us spends every franc she has" for things such as "cigarettes, tooth-wash and brushes" for soldiers under their care. "Oh, The need for money!" Her tent mate, on the other hand, was receiving "good big cheques" from an uncle with which to buy "great boxes" of supplies for the sick and wounded.

By August 1915, the toll of living under canvas at age 55 and nursing in a hospital whose patient load had swelled to 400 was taking a heavy toll on nurse Tupper's health. By November, she returned home on leave aboard a hospital ship. During a two-month stay in Bridgewater, she gave talks on her wartime nursing and raised money for soldiers' convalescent hospitals in England.

Late December saw Tupper on nursing duty at Ramsgate, Kent, England. She'd been re-assigned to the Granville Canadian Special Hospital, described by the online website Wartime Memories Project as a "requisitioned Spa Hotel overlooking the sea" accommodating up to 800 patients suffering from "shell shock" and nerve, joint and bone injuries.

But, by February 1916 she was back in France until November when she was posted to the Hillingdon House Convalescent Hospital, at Uxbridge, a suburban town in west London. A former private estate, it was originally purchased by the British government as a site to locate a German Prisoner of War Camp. Instead, due to public pressure, it had become a hospital caring for 512 patients by October 1916. It was there that Nurse Tupper contracted pneumonia which claimed her life that December.

Bridgewater nurse Louise Benjamin survived the war but remained in the United Kingdom eight months after the Armistice. After the war ended, she was based at a hospital serving the Canadian Demobilization Camp at Kenmel Park, Wales. It housed disgruntled Canadian troops awaiting repatriation by ships struggling to keep up with the number of soldiers anxious to return home. At one point, frustrations boiled to the point of rioting which claimed the lives of several soldiers.

Benjamin returned home to Bridgewater in June 1919, married merchant William Feindel in 1920 and, after his death, resumed her nursing career at Camp Hill Hospital, Halifax.

As was a trend at the time, nurses, Eve Clements of Liverpool, N.S, trained as a nurse in the United States. But rather than returning home, she decided to join the United States Army Nursing Service when America entered the war.

Dr. Tennyson, professor emeritus of history at University of Cape Breton, was a member and chairmen of the DesBrisay Museum Commission, while residing in Bridgewater. Author of 19 books and numerous historical journals, his current book, printed under the Nimbus imprint, is available at Coles Book Stores and at the museum gift shop in the Bridgewater mall.

John Cunningham, is a retired journalist and author living in Bridgewater.

Lockeport cenotaph gets a refresh in time for Remembrance Day 2026

By KEVIN MCBAIN
kevin.mcbain@southshorebulletin.ca

LOCKEPORT – Those that haven't been to the Lockeport cenotaph in a while, will be in for a pleasant surprise.

Dave Holdaway, president of the Lockeport Legion Branch #80, has been busy over the past several months, working hard to restore the cenotaph and the area.

"It was just before Remembrance Day that I noticed how blasé the cenotaph looked," he said. "I thought there's got to be something we can do to clean it up and give it the respect it deserves."

Holdaway started off by going to town council and laying out a plan that he had in mind.

"I told them I wanted to put in some benches, get the cenotaph power washed and sandblasted and get new plaques. The names on our WWI and WWII plaques are the names of the people in town that never returned," he said.

"They still have family here today. I thought why not spruce it up so they can actually see the names on the plaques."

He also contacted Veterans Affairs and after about eight months received word that his grant application had been approved. Having that in hand, he went back to council and they gave him permission to start his project.

Holdaway called a special meeting of the Legion members who whole heartedly gave him permission to spend some money and go ahead with the work. He got a few quotes from businesses and the work got started.

Holdaway did a lot of the painting and scrubbing as well. He said that it took about nine months from start to finish to get the project completed.

Work included power washing and sandblasting the cenotaph. The cross on top was also bent and rusted – that was fixed. The plaques are new and Holdaway painted the walkway white, put red stripes on it and added 'Lest We Forget' up front.

He said the white paint on the walkway indicated the peace that "these folks are in" and the sacrifice they made. The red stripes are for the blood they spilled.

At the top of the walkway, a soldier, kneeling in prayer before he goes to battle is also painted on the walk. At the top of the walkway I have a soldier kneeling in prayer before going into battle and then I have four planters, red and white tulips that will be planted and a couple of benches where you can go and sit, read a book and have a coffee.

CONTRIBUTED PHOTOS

The Lockeport cenotaph and the area surrounding it received a major refresh over the past several months. The project, led by Lockeport Legion President Dave Holdaway, saw many improvements to the area. A blessing of Veterans Park was held Oct. 14.

"For some reason that place is quiet, there's no birds chirping, there's no sound when you are sitting there. It's something you have to experience. Being a veteran myself it means a lot to have a place that I can go to."

As well, the archway, made by Roscoe Ironworks in Shelburne. "He did a fantastic job of it," Holdaway noted.

Why did he decide to take on this project?

"I spent five years in Germany and I was able to walk through a lot of the Canadian cemeteries in France, Italy, Belgium, Holland and Germany and I saw the way they were taken care of," he said. "I realized that these guys, even though they may be resting in foreign countries, their spirit is still here in Lockeport and they deserve something better than what they had."

The project cost just over $17,000. Grants from federal and provincial entities came to about $5,000 with the Legion contributing $12,000.

The Legion, celebrating its 80th year, will again host the town's Remembrance Day service on Nov. 11 beginning at about 10:45 a.m. inside the Baptist Church. Following the service, everyone is invited for the laying of wreaths at the cenotaph. Then everyone is invited to the Legion for some reminiscing.

Why keeping your pet's microchip information current matters

ASHLEY KIPPERS
SHAID Tree Animal Shelter General Manager

A tiny microchip can make a world of difference when a beloved pet goes missing. But while having a cat or dog microchipped is an important step in responsible pet ownership, keeping the registered contact information up to date is just as essential.

At SHAID Animal Shelter in Whynotts Settlement, we regularly meet people who bring us stray cats and dogs they have found. One of the first things we can do is scan for a microchip, which may help us reunite the animal with their family. Unfortunately, the information linked to the chip is not always current or accessible.

Families move, phone numbers change and pets sometimes find new homes without their microchip registration being updated. In other cases, the information may be set to unsearchable, making it difficult and sometimes impossible to track down the registered owner.

A microchip contains a unique identification number that can be read with a scanner. Unlike a GPS tracker, it does not reveal an animal's location. Instead, the number is used to look up the owner's contact details through a microchip registry. When that information is outdated or unavailable, reuniting a lost pet with their family becomes much more challenging.

Fortunately, keeping your pet's information current is a simple way to help protect them. If you move, change your phone number, or rehome a pet, remember to update the registration. New owners should ensure the microchip details are transferred into their name and their contact information is correct. If you are unsure which registry holds your pet's information, your veterinary clinic or the organization that arranged the microchip may be able to help.

To help make microchipping accessible to our community, SHAID offers microchip clinics once a month

Meet Owlin, a gentle five-year-old female looking for a quiet, understanding home. Owlin is a timid girl who can be easily startled by noise and prefers to take life at her own pace.

by appointment for $50. To book, call the shelter or email info@shaidanimalshelter.com. A collar and identification tag are also valuable, providing visible contact information for anyone who finds your pet.

At SHAID, helping animals find their way home is just one part of our work. We also care for cats waiting for families of their own, including Owlin, a gentle five-year-old female looking for a quiet, understanding home.

Owlin is a timid girl who can be easily startled by noise and prefers to take life at her own pace. She will need a patient person who respects her boundaries and gives her time to feel safe. We are allowing her to build confidence at her own comfort level, hoping that her sweet personality will shine through as she settles in. For the right person, earning Owlin's trust could be a very special reward.

Whether it means updating a microchip registration, giving a shy cat the time she needs, or helping a lost animal get home, small acts of care can have a lasting impact.

SHAID is also looking forward to welcoming the community to our open house on November 14. As a donation-funded shelter serving Lunenburg and Queens Counties and surrounding areas, we are grateful for the community members whose kindness and support help us continue caring for animals in need.

Past performance and future guarantees

SUSANNE BECK
Reality Check

Past performance is no guarantee of future results. I'm sure you've heard this when financial products are discussed. No one wants to be held responsible for what may, or may not, happen in the future. It is, after all, out of our control! Even when every indicator points in one direction, things could change. We never know for sure what will happen.

That general principle covers more than finances, doesn't it? No matter how well or badly everything is going right now for us, things can change. Those changes may be predictable, in ways that are largely under our control.

Or, they could change in completely unexpected ways. The actions of other people can have an impact on our lives. Events, near or far away, can affect what we experience right here in our own homes.

Changes that are beyond our control sometimes arrive in the form of delightful surprises. Other times though, those out-of-control surprises are not so good. All we know is that our control is limited. We can control what we do in response, but the "out of our control" part means something, doesn't it?

Whether we're talking about money or life in general, the recognition that future results are not guaranteed can be a source of worry. How will we cope if things get difficult? How can we prepare if we don't know what will happen?

It's here that I believe that looking at past performance is, in fact, an important part of preparation.

For example, think about the people you have chosen to be part of your life. Among them, who do you seek out when you have a difficulty and need some wisdom? Whose judgement do you trust? What do you base that decision on?

It's likely that somewhere in your decision-making process, you asked, "Do the choices this person makes generally work out well or badly? How has their advice worked out for me in the past?"

We often guide our future actions using what we have learned from the past; we use our experience.

But wait! That sounds logical and rational and sensible. Do we always do that? Hmm. Have you ever trusted someone, been disappointed and then said to yourself, "I should have seen that coming"? Past performance had, in fact, sent us a warning, but we chose to disregard it. Why?

Our experience provides input for our decisions, but it's not the only input. We also have our needs and our wants, including our values and beliefs that motivate us. Perhaps we want to think the best of others. We may want a world where people always behave ethically and responsibly, who share our values and do the right thing just as we would! That wish may be so strong that we choose to overlook other indications that point in a different direction.

Can you imagine that happening? You have your own experiences; you can answer that for yourself.

Past performance doesn't give us a guarantee. However, when we choose to look carefully through the lens of experience, we may well find helpful information about people and events. Examining our experience, our own past performance, is also a useful way to learn about our own strengths, the mistake we may have made, and the resilience we have shown. All of this can help us make more effective choices for the future.

Even though we're not offered future guarantees, we have choices in the present. We can hope for the best, encourage the best, but also use our experiences to prepare for the future.

Does experience play an important role in your decision-making? Let me know at choice@focusonclarity.com or by mail c/o South Shore Bulletin.

To your choices! ~ Susanne ~

A new season of Project FeederWatch

JAMES HIRTLE
Bird Notes

Project FeederWatch turns your love of feeding birds into scientific discoveries.

FeederWatch runs from Nov. 1 to April 30 and this will be the 40th season. It is a survey of birds that visit backyards, nature centres, community areas, and other locales in North America.

While most people focus on birds coming to bird feeding stations, you don't even need a feeder! All you need is an area from which you like to watch birds. You can count every week or once all winter, for as much or as little time as you like.

Project FeederWatch is operated by the Cornell Lab of Ornithology and Birds Canada with funding nearly entirely provided by participants or members. Unfortunately, there is a fee to participate in this project as the Cornell Lab of Ornithology and Birds Canada are non-profit organizations.

So, you would have to get a membership with either or. I always get a membership with Birds Canada, which allows me to participate. The fee covers website and database maintenance, data analysis, participant support, printing and shipping project materials and dissemination of information learned from FeederWatch data.

With each season, FeederWatch increases in importance as a monitoring tool for more than 100 bird species that winter in North America. It gives us a weekly picture about changes in bird distribution and abundance across the United States and Canada. It tells us where the birds are as well as to where they are not.

In short, the data is important as it provides information about bird population biology that cannot be detected by any other available method.

It has been another slow week in Lunenburg County in terms of migrants and bird watching. At this time of year, it is a good day if you break 20 species. I did have one good day on Oct. 28 where I saw 28 species of birds.

I guess my best birds for seeing over the past week were a Wilson's snipe at Steverman's Lake in Lilydale, a Bonaparte's gull at Kingsburg Beach and an American pipit at Kingsburg Beach.

On Oct. 24 Anne Drew of Mosher Island reported seeing a northern harrier. Miguel Morales spotted three Canada jays in Broad Cove along the Bear Trap Road. Mark Dennis reported a red-bellied woodpecker in his Clam Point Yard on Cape Sable Island. Emerson Fiske discovered a northern mockingbird at West Head near Lockeport. On Oct. 25 Robert Keereweer saw snow buntings and horned larks at the far end of Cherry Hill Beach. On Oct. 29 Miguel Morales spotted two dickcissels in Broad Cove.

Birds on the Nova Scotia rare bird alert over the past week were tropical kingbird, pink-footed goose and western kingbird.

Again, lots of great stuff has shown up in Yarmouth and Digby Counties. They included a flight of over 2,000 American robins, brown thrasher, two great egrets, yellow-headed blackbird, a group of 28 eastern bluebirds, pomarine jaeger and large numbers of black-legged kittiwakes, indigo bunting, hermit thrushes and northern mockingbird.

An American Pipit caught on camera at Kingsburg Beach Oct. 21.

Halifax Municipality produced yellow-throated warblers, yellow-breasted chat, white-crowned sparrow, eastern towhee and red-eyed vireo.

Birds in the northeast mainland included marsh wrens, parasitic jaeger, lark sparrow, dickcissel, two blue-gray gnatcatchers, two indigo buntings and orange-crowned warbler. The valley area produced yellow-throated warbler, black-headed gull, purple sandpiper, and a flock of 2000 blackbirds.

The two-second pause

STEPHANIE MILLER VINCENT
Business Moments

She picked up the book the way you pick up anything at a vendor market. Casually. Half-interested. One hand still holding her coffee.

Then she read the cover.

What They Say When You Walk Away.

And she stopped.

Not for long. Two seconds, maybe. But I watched it happen 18 times last Sunday at Next Chapter: Halifax, standing behind my table at the Spatz Theatre on the day my first book officially met the world. Someone would read the title, and something would cross their face. A small laugh. A wince. A slow nod. An intake of breath loud enough to hear if you were listening and easy enough to understand if you've been there.

I've come to think of it as the two-second pause. And after 30 years in hospitality, I can tell you it's the most important two seconds in leadership.

Here's why.

Every one of us who has ever led a team whether it's a kitchen, a front desk, a shop on Main Street, a crew of summer students has a reputation in the back room. It's built from a thousand small moments: how you say good morning, what happens when someone calls in sick, whether you notice the dishwasher who stayed late. Nobody hands you a report card. But your team is grading you every day, and they talk about it the minute you walk out the door.

The pause is the moment you wonder what they're saying.

Most leaders skip it. Not because they don't care, but because they're busy. Being busy is the great excuse of our industry. In fact, we wear it as a badge of honour. There's always a delivery, a no-show, a reservation for 12 that just became 18. I know. I've been there for 27 restaurant openings and a career that grew to leading 777 people across 13 restaurants. Busy is real. But busy is also where good leaders stop seeing their people.

I learned that the hard way. Years ago, after 16 straight 16-hour days, I took one day off. My GM texted me 53 times. Nothing was wrong. The team was doing exactly what we'd trained them to do. He just never stopped long enough to see it. I decided to leave that day.

I share that story not as a complaint, but as a mirror. I tell it because every one of us has a version of that GM in us. The difference between the leaders people stay for and the ones people leave isn't talent or charisma. It's whether they take the pause.

So, here's my invitation this week, wherever you lead:

Take two seconds tomorrow. Before you walk out the door at the end of your shift, stop and ask yourself honestly: what will they say when I leave?

If the answer makes you smile, keep doing what you're doing. If it makes you wince, good. That wince is information. It's the beginning of becoming someone your team talks about with pride instead of under their breath.

The women at my table on Sunday didn't need me to explain the book. The pause explained it for them.

The question isn't comfortable. It isn't supposed to be. But it's the most honest leadership tool I know, and it's free. It takes two seconds.

What do they say when you walk away?

MEMORIAMS

In loving memory of our son Blake Leblanc, who passed away November 5, 2019.
Dear Blake:
We wish we could see you one more time
Come walking through the door
But we know that is impossible
We will hear your voice no more
God called your name so softly, that only you could hear
And no one heard the footsteps of angels drawing near
It broke our hearts to lose you
You did not go alone
For part of us went with you
The day God called you home.
The face we love is missing.
The voice we love is gone
A place is vacant in our hearts that never can be filled.
Daily thoughts and silent tears
A special wish that you were here
No longer in our life to share
But in our heart, you're always there.
Loving you always Forgetting you never.
Mom & Dad (Jane & Ron);
wife, Claire; brother Clarke and Supattra.

Andrew Robar - 1972 - 2015
In loving memory of a son, father, and brother, who left us 11 years ago.
God looked around his garden and found an empty place
He then looked down upon the earth and saw your tired face
He put his arms around you and lifted you to rest
God's garden must be beautiful, he always takes the best
He knew that you were suffering, he knew you were in pain
He knew that you would never get well on earth again
He saw the road was getting rough, and the hills were hard to climb
So he closed your weary eyelids and whispered "peace be thine"
It broke our hearts to lose you but you did not go alone
For part of us went with you the day God called you home
Greatly missed and sadly loved by Mom & Dad; daughter, Samantha & family; son, Lucas; sister, Annette & family; Brother, Arden & family

Lunenburg Literary Festival just around the corner

SOUTH SHORE BULLETIN STAFF

LUNENBURG – The 11th annual Lunenburg Literary Festival, or LIT as it is oft-referred to, is happening this weekend, Nov. 5-7.

This year's festival, hosted by South Shore Public Libraries, features crime and mystery writers such as C.S. Porter, Vicki Grant, BR Myers and Jane Doucet.

"It's a nice intimate festival with smaller audiences with a chance to get a book signed, ask some questions and hear directly from the authors in a small, intimate setting," Ashley Nunn-Smith describes the event and says having it this way, draws in a lot of people.

The event will kick-off Nov. 5 with a children's event with Vivian Zhou, author and illustrator of the Atana graphic novels, who will share her thoughts and ideas with students at Bluenose Academy.

On the night of Nov. 6, author and journalist Stephen Kimber joins crime writer, Porter to discuss Kimber's latest book, Traitor's Game, described as a "noir mystery with elements of spy fiction and police procedural."

Porter describers their award-winning books, Beneath Her Skin and Salt on Her Tongue as "psychological pressure cookers that ... blur the line of guilt and innocence."

On Nov. 7, Grant's book, These Are the Fireworks; Myers' most recent gothic novel, The Third Wife of Faraday House, brings ghostly secrets to regency-era Canada; and Doucet's Blood Typed uncovers murder and mayhem at a Nova Scotia literary event.

As well, for those that want to try their own hand at writing, on the afternoon of Nov. 7, a free workshop will be hosted by Grant.

"This is new for us. The author we have facilitating it is a well-established young adult author who is now moving into the adult world," said Christina Pottie, community engagement co-ordinator for South Shore Public Libraries. "She's a fantastic resource and we're thrilled that she's going to offer this for us."

Events, all besides the school event Nov. 5, will be held at the parish hall at St. John's Anglican Church. Tickets for the Friday and Saturday events (7 p.m.) can be purchased for $20 at any branch of the South Shore Public Libraries and online at the festival's website.

Bridgewater to host international conference in 2028

By KEVIN MCBAIN

BRIDGEWATER – The Town of Bridgewater will host the biennial International Network of Michelin Cities Conference in the spring of 2028.

The conference will bring representatives from across the network's 22 member cities for a five-day program.

The announcement follows Bridgewater's participation in this year's event held in Italy, where they were chosen. A presentation was held at Bridgewater's latest council meeting held Oct. 26 and council gave the nod to go ahead with planning.

No funding has been asked for.

Previous meetings have been held in Clermont-Ferrand, France (2017) – Inaugural convention hosted at Michelin's International headquarters; Vitoria-Gasteiz, Spain (2019); Santiago de Querétaro, Mexico (2022); Anderson, South Carolina (2024); and Cuneo, Italy (2026).

A founding member of the INMC, Bridgewater has played a leadership role since the organization's creation and continues to serve on its executive board.

"To be able to officially announce and get council's approval to host the 2028 INMC conference is amazing. It's quite a feeling. It's quite something for our town to host an international conference," said Town of Bridgewater Mayor David Mitchell.

The event attracts about 200 people each year, however, Mitchell says that with the heightened anticipation that he felt at this past conference he is thinking there will be more.

"Since 2019 Bridgewater has been that city. We have been really the most requested place to host one of the conferences, so now that the timing is right for us, I think we're going to see even more people."

Mitchell said there are usually two to three cities vying to host the conference and a vote is taken. In this case, there were three, but the two others backed out when they heard that Bridgewater was one vying to host.

Mitchell said getting the conference is quite a coup for the community.

He said the town's economic development officer, Donna Hatt, put things into perspective.

"Donna Hatt said we've been punching well above our weight. This is just another example where these cities that have populations in the millions and some in the 10s of millions are saying we want to go to Bridgewater. I'm really excited."

Visitors attending the 2028 conference will experience many of the features that have helped establish Bridgewater's reputation. Visiting delegates will have opportunities to explore the town and surrounding region, including local businesses, Bridgewater's vibrant downtown and riverfront, parks and natural spaces, community facilities, as well as to learn more about the town's initiatives and strong sense of community.

One of the big things that the conference brings, is basic...exposure to an international audience.

As written about in last week's paper, founder Gregg Curwin, and the Petite Riviere Farming Company Ltd., who won the INMC Startup Pitch competition in Italy, last month, has been a recipient of what kind of exposure that being a part of the INMC can bring – networking, contacts are huge.

"As Gregg explained, he's had a lot of interest, not just provincially, but nationally and internationally coming out of that. Imagine that on a scale even greater when we can showcase our conference winner in our own backyard," said Mitchell.

"The international exposure is a lot and it translates into economic activity. We've seen this before where we've got interest from international corporations and businesses, especially with Exit 12A. It puts us on a map whereas a lot of small communities can't get that international exposure unless you're talking to people internationally. I think it is going to be huge for us."
